United States Patent 5,438,696, Napoles, relates to a radio communication device that is capable of using a voltage multiplier to make use of a low voltage/long life battery, while avoiding radio frequency interference that is commonly produced by voltage multipliers. This device may then be used as a radio page receiver.

United States Patent 5,420,576, Matai et al., relates to a personal radio paging receiver that is capable of preventing noise disturbances from a DC/DC converter.

Respectfully submitted,
